Several of the recent plantings of Old English Boxwood made from the Conwell Gardens

NO other shrub can take the place of Boxwood with its rich, dark green foliage, its stately grandeur, its perennial beauty and its air of living antiquity—And nowhere, save in the heart of the Boxwood country, will you find a collection with such rich color, such heavy foliage and such a wide variety of shapes and sizes from which to make your selection.

A few specimen from this magnificent collection available for immediate planting

THIS Spring, in addition to a very beautiful array of smaller stock of every conceivable size and shape, we offer a number of very rare specimen of large size. Many of these offerings are really collectors' pieces—splendid, stately reminders of generations past. These gorgeous large pieces are being offered for Spring planting at prices which are surprisingly low for specimen of such rare size and charm. Any one of them would make a marvelous "spot" on any estate or arranged as the center of a grouping.

Small, nursery grown stock for borders, edges and window boxes

APART of the Conwell gardens is devoted to smaller stock which has become noted for its heavy, dense foliage formation, for its uniformity of quality and for its hardiness. In this nursery we have both varieties of Buxus—suffruticosa for walk borders and flower bed edgings—sempervirens for window boxes and hedge planting.

*Every Conwell planting is guaranteed
to Live and Thrive*

SUCCESS with Boxwood plantings—the absolute satisfaction of the purchaser of this beautiful, old shrub—is almost entirely dependent upon the care and skill used in transplanting.

Small fibrous roots must be carefully preserved in digging—protection from the sun provided—covers must be made specially and laced in place to insure protection from damage in transit—generous balls of earth must be taken with every specimen if plants are to thrive in their new locations.

Such has been our success in transplanting that for eight years our replacements have been less than one-tenth of one per cent. Every Conwell planting is guaranteed to live and thrive—and our prices are surprisingly reasonable.

"The Aristocrat of Evergreens"

THE quaint, home-like atmosphere of the Old English cottage—the geometrically perfect proportions of French or Italian court—in any setting, for any effect, Boxwood lends an added charm.

All sizes and shapes—matched pairs—beautiful hedges—all assembled for your selection—ready to add to your own property a bit of century-old grace and enchantment—at a cost which is well within reason.
